Mrs. President Harrison Gives a Recipe for Thursday's Dinner.

THE DAY AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

Housekeeping as Practiced by the Ladies of the Cabinet.

BOW THE PRESIDENT CARVES TURKEY

(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE DISPATCE.) WASHINGTON, D. C., November 23 .-The coming Thanksgiving will be generally celebrated in Washington. The kitchens of the big society houses of the capital are already buszing like bee hives, and there are as many liveried turnouts in front of will see at one of Mrs. Harrison's receptions. The society women of Washington often market for themselves, and you bump up against the wives of Cabinet ministers, Supreme Court justices, and leading army officers in buying your daily provisions. Mrs. Senator Sherman does her own marketing, Mrs. Senator Kenna is a good judge of ments, and Mrs. John A. Logan, by bend-ing backward and forward the breastbone of a chicken, can tell to a day how long it has been born. The leading ladies of Washington shine in their kitchens as well as their parlors, and there are few among them which can not play a tune on the cooking stove, and play it well. In no city in the world could you get up a dinner under the recommendations of so many famous cooka. Each lady has her specialty, and I am able, through the kindness of these noted women, to give you to-day a set of recipes tor dishes which, if accurately followed, will furnish you the best dinner you ever sat down to. I will let the President's wife start the feast.

Mrs. Harrison is an advocate of American cooking, and the menu of the party gathered round the Presidental mahogany on next Thursday will include the good old-fashioned dishes which have made our American I will begin with conce belonged to Ben Holliday, of priore fame, has hardly had time to think of her cuisine since she came to Washing-ioned dishes which have made our American Thanksgivings so noted. It will begin with her famous bouillon, which was colebrated at her receptions as a Senator's wife, and which will undoubtedly figure on the menus. of the other big dinners of the White House this season. It is made as follows:

SOUP FOR THE PRESIDENT. Four pounds of lean beef, four quarts of water, one teaspoonful of celery seed, two small onlons, two small carrots, one bunch of parsley, air blades of mace, 16 whole cloves, the whites four eggs; salt and pepper to taste. (at the beef in pieces the size of a walnut, taking care not to leave a particle of fat on them. Pour on it the water and let it boil up three times; skimming well each time; for if any of the grease is allowed to go back into the soup, it will be impossible to get it clear. Scrape the carrots, slick four cloves firmly into each onion, and put them in the soup. Then, add the celery seed, parsley, mace, pepper, and salt. Let this boil until the vegetables are tender, thea strain through a bag, return to the souppot, and stir in the well-beatten whites of the eggs. Boil until the eggs gather to one side. Washington is one of the great oyster washington is one of the great oyster markets of the world, and a Washington sciety woman's opinion of oysters is worthy of notice. To such as wish to use oysters as their first course, I would inform them that we do not believe in the Blue Point, and that these oysters are seldom found in the market. Mrs. Stanley Matthews, whose dinners have always been known as among the most recherche of that gastronomic circle, known as the Supreme Court, says that the Lynn Havens are the best of the American bivalves, and she serves these, fat and luscious, very cold, with a bit of lemon in the conventional half dozen. Mrs. Justice Matthews makes a salad which would tickle the palate of Brillatt Savarin. It never fails to bring a smile to the rubicund faces of the Jnesices, and bere it is:

Mrs. STANLEY MATTHEWS' RECIPE.

Take the meat, free from skin, and fat, of two large bolled chickens, cut in dice; with the stream of plate, which and the comes into play to make a king dout of the cream and and the stream and the strength of the conventional content of the conventional conventions and the conventional half dozen. Mrs. Justice Mrs. McDonald's housekeeping has a national reputation, for many statesmen have tested the hospitality of her lovely bome in Indianapolis. She never appears at better advantage then at the head of her two large bolled chickens, cut in dice; with the matter that prevented him from making the arrangement of two larges to the whites of two eggs, and not with the deads. The distance by water from St. Louis to Chattanooga is less than that. Therefore, I suppose we may safely assume that the rate on fill with the cream; blanch almonds and cover with the cream, and put a content of all and other trace of the Western and Atlanta would be sent from St. Louis to Chattanooga will be about 40 cents per 100 pounds. The present rate from St. Louis to Chattanooga will be about 40 cents per 100 pounds. The present rate from St. Louis to Atlanta would be 90 cents per 100, as against the present rate from St. Louis this mix thoroughly an equal quantity of good, white, crip celery, cut in small pieces; three white, crip celety, cut in small pieces; three clives, chopped; two teaspoonfuls of capers; make a dressing of six spoonfuls of best imported clive oil, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, two teaspoonfuls of salt, and a dash of red pepper, pour over the salad, and let it stand for several hours in the ice-box. Prepare a mayonnaise in the following manner: Break two eggs very carefully, and put the yolks into a soup plate; then add, drop by drop, a pint bottle of best clive oil, stirring steadily one way with a silver fork; as the dressing thickens, thin with lemon juice, keeping it of the consistency of rich cream; add salt and cayenne ermer to taste. Make a mound of the chicken sistency of rich cream; add salt and cayenne pepper to taste. Make a mound of the chicken saind on a platter, pour over the mayon-naise, and garnish with lettuce, olives, beets and carrots cut in fancy forms. MARY K, MATTHEWS.

Few people will be ambitious enough to attempt hors d'œuvres for the holiday feast, where simplicity and good old-inshioned plenty are the rule. But Mrs. Dahlgren's suggestion of serving two chicken pasties, one of them sweet, for this course, is a tempting one. I presume a sweet pasty should be prepared in the regulation way, with the addition of sugar. Mrs. Danlgren had the idea from a New England relative a notable housewife—and remembers nothing further than that the two pasties were served together—a most delectable feature of the dinner. She writes glowingly in regard to it, and gives the suggestion to your

CARVING THE WHITE HOUSE TURKEY. There has been no improvement in the way to prepare a turkey. It is stuffed and dressed in the manner of our childhood, when our little noses just reached to the level of the kitchen table, where we were delighted to stand and watch the attractive process and to smell the savory stuffing. A visitor at the Harrison household in Indian-apolis, just after the election last fall, tells of a toothsome dinner he enjoyed there, where a gobbler brown and luscious was the piece de resistance. The President carved, will make everyone anxious to try it, and where a gooder brown and fuscious was the piece de resistance. The President carved, and his manipulation of the bird was appetizing in itself. It is a good old-fashioned custom—that of carving meats at the family board—and one that is still in voque at the majority of American dinner tables, for it is only among the fashionables of the city that arrives is Russe has been considered. that service a la Russe has been generally

There is no daintier dinner table in Washington than that of Mrs. Senator Cameron, who gives it her personal supervision. There the service is from the side, Mrs. Cameron holding to certainly the sensible opinion that the host should not divide his attention between his guests and a roast. It is perhaps a bit of pardonable vanity in the Senator which tempts him to carve the canvas-backs himself. He does it so daintily and adroitly that it is a pleasure to watch him. Two strokes of a sharp game kusie and the juicy red flesh of the duck is separated from the skeleton.

There is no lack of epicures among the statesmen at the capital. Mr. Bayard's respect for terrapin and his interest in the preparation of the same is well known. The recipe he used is as follows: Take two "counts" and boil in the shell, after allow-ing them to cool, remove the shell, take out gall bladder and cut the terrapin in good sized pieces, put in a chafing dish, and to this add small cupiul of rich cream, half a pound of butter and a couple wineglasses full of sherry or Madeira. Most epicures prefer Madeira because of its rich flavor. to one has ever tasted terrapin prepared atter this recipe who is not a convert to its

CABINET HOUSEKEEPING.

All of the Cabinet are settled in their own frames, and will—with perhaps the excep-tion of Mrs. Proctor, whose son's continued idness keeps her at their lovely Northern beme—take their holiday meal at the capi-tal. The Blaines have established the lares and penates in the historical old Seward house, with the Camerons for neighbors, and the family will be gathered within its hospitable doors which have so long been

The Blaine housekeeping is modeled after that of New England, and there is at the capital no more perfectly ordered house-hold than that of the Secretary of State. Mrs. Blaine believes in quality rather than quantity for her table, and her diuners are marvels of exquisite taste.

Mrs. Windom's charming house on Massachusetts avenue, near Thomas Circle, is at last free from the hands of decorators and house-furnishers, and the family are really settled enough to enjoy their Thanksgiving dinner. It will be a merry feast, for Mrs Windom is a believer in old traditions and customs, and there is no veil of mystery hanging over her kitchen, whose administration she perfectly understands. Massa-chusetts avenue, to my mind the most beau-tiful street in Washington, is a favorite with this Administration and boasts of four Cabinet homes, The Secretary of Agricul-ture lives just on the other side of Thomas Circle from the Windoms, in the house the Lincolns once occupied.

Mrs. Rusk, like Mrs. Blaine and Mrs. Windom, is no stranger to life in Washington, and her household here is running as smoothly as if there had been no interval between Mr. Rusk's service in the House and are as many liveried turnouts in front of the Market house every morning as you farmers will undoubtedly adorn the Thanksgiving table of the head of the Department of Agriculture with choice proofs of their industry, but the dainty desserts will be prepared from Mrs. Rusk's own directions, and among them will be served a Russian cream, popular just now that the Russian fever has laid hold on every one and everything in the United States. Russian cookery, Russian servants, Russian clothes, and Russian what-not are the rule. Mrs. Rusk's recipe is as follows:

MRS. SECRETARY RUSK'S RECIPE. Jelly-To one package of Cox's gelatine add one pint of cold water. When dissolved, add one pint of hot water, two cups of sugar, juice of her cuisine since she came to Washington, so busy has she been with establishing her family in the pretty home, which has been newly decorated and newly furnished, but she knows the value of a well-ordered kitchen, and it is the next department o her domestic economy that she has marked for attention. In the work of getting set-tled she has had all possible assistance from her sisters, the Misses Halstead, who make their home with her. Of all the Cabinet women, Mrs. Noble is probably best pleased with, and most enthusiastic over, life in Washington.

Mrs. Cullom has added her home to the other official ones on Massachusetts avenue, and is already settled in the lovely house, 1726. A candy table, over which Mrs. Cul. lom presided, and which she stocked with bon-bons of her own manufacture, was the teature of one of the charity entertainments not long since. Every one was enthusiastic over the sweetness she dispensed, and dethe recipe for its manufacture. Such candy will be appreciated at Thanksgiving, especially as we feel we can indulge ourselves then in things the doctor or dyspepsia

She never appears at better advantage than at the head of her daintily appointed table, where her wonder-ful tact and knowledge of the world comes into play to make her friends feel themselves at home. ton, and will in the near future build a bome here. Here is a receipt for plum pudding:

This pudding is best when prepared, all but milk and eggs, the day before using. Seed and cut in half one pound of the best bloom raisins; pick, wash and dry before the fire one pound of Zante currants, commonly called plums; dredge the fruit well with four, to prevent its sinking or clogging; take one pound of fresh beef suet, freed from the skin, and string and chop very fine; one pint of grated bread crumbs and a half pint of sifted flour; a large quarter of a pound of best sugar; a large tablespoonful of powdered mace and ciunamon mixed, and two powdered nutmegs; all the spice to be steeped in a half pint of mixed whe and brandy; put away these ingredients separately, closely covered, and let them stand all night. Next morning finish the pudding, which requires at least six hours' boiling. Beat wine and eggs together until very thick and smooth; then add one pint of rich milk; then the bread crumbs and flour; mix with the sugar the grated yellow rind and juice of two lemons, and add to the mixture gradually all the prepared ingredients, stirring hard; if too thick, add more milk; if too thin, add more bread crumbs; take care not to have too much bread or flour, or the pudding will be heavy; add two teaspoonsful of baking powder, one-quarter of a pound of ciron: boll in tin molds; serve with lemon sauce, or with butter and sugar beaten to a cream and flavored with nutmeg and rose.

HARRISON FRUIT CAKE.

Mrs. Ingulis has delayed her coming, and will celebrate the Thanksgiving holiday with her husband and children in their Kansas home, where the good things of life abound. Game, vegetables, fruits and everything, with perhaps the exception of oysters, are as excellent in the Kansas markets as with us, says Mrs Ingalls. The quails are really much better, their flavor being affected by their food, which they get in the wheat fields. Mrs. Ingalls gives me the very reading of the directions for mak-ing causes one's mouth to water. It will doubtless prove as delicious as the recipe promises. Mrs. Ingalis understands gastronomy, her table is always daintily spread, and she perhaps has come to believe kind."

One pound of butter; one pound of flour; one-quarter of a pound of sugar (fine granulated); one dozen eggs; two pounds of citron; two small coccanuts grated; two pounds bleached almonds; one wineglassful of wine; one wineglassful of brandy; one teaspoonful of ground cinnamon; one grated autmeg; one teaspoonful of ground mace; two teaspoonful of pound mace; two teaspoonful of baking powder; cream, butter and sugar; and ergs, thoroughly beaten, but not separated. Mix baking powder with flour; then add and lastly throw in fruit, thoroughly chopped and floured. Bake in a show oven, When done the cake will leave the sides of the pan.

With this recipe for Harrison cake I close the menu of the bill of fare for your Thanksgiving dinner. The recipes which I have given you have all been tested, and they have given satisfaction to the most noted gastronomes of the country. Dishes cooked from them have fed the brains of senators, generals, judges and diplomats, and if you follow the directions you will add to your cuisine a set of dishes which will be the joy of your own family and the envy of your neighbors.

Says:

The results of the opening of the Tennessee river to navigation by the removal of the obstructions at Mussel shoals, will have a more decided bearing on the transportation problem of the South than all the Railroad Commissions or Inter-State Commerce Commissions which the State or National Governments could organize and empower in the most plenary manner, and will exceed any rate war in their effect upon the public, because rate wars reduce the tariffs to ridiculous figures, but within a few weeks at the farthest come to an end by mutual agreement of all the lines that they cannot afford to hurt themselves for the purpose of hurting each other. This reduction of rates is one of vast importance to Georgia and South Carolina, and it will be a permanent reduction and permanent cheapening of the cost of bringing Western grain, hay and flour, and to a considerable extent Western manufactured articles into the Southeast.
